

General information on the site, respect for privacy, and copyright law

1. Protection of the right to privacy:

The site observes the Belgian law of December 8, 1992 regarding protection of the right to privacy in dealing with personal data as it was amended by the law of October 24, 1995 implementing the European directive of October 24, 1995. This law provides that personal consent must be obtained in advance of the collection of any personal data concerning the individual in question; that the personal data must be relevant, appropriate, and true; and finally that the data must be collected for a specific, clear, and legitimate purpose. The person from whom personal data has been collected must have the right to access and rectify the data that concerns him or her. Finally, the law requires a declaration to the Commission for the Protection of Privacy of the automatic processing of personal data.
